

Leadership for Today's World

A practical, hands on training for male supervisors and leaders in skilled trades.
6 modules, delivered weekly for a total of 30 hours in-person and online

Leaders have a lot of power and influence. Understanding this and using it well can create a positive ripple effect in the workplace.

Learn, practice and apply...

- How to create a workforce that supports and includes women and the male leaders working with them
- How to communicate and interact with women and those different than ourselves - what to say, what not to say, how to respond
- What the workforce will look like over the next 10 years and how you can fit into what is happening
- What role male supervisors can play in supporting women on the worksite
- How to deal with conflict when things go wrong

Change is happening and the pace is fast. How do leaders make sure people aren't left behind so they can perform well and get good business results?

Who Should Attend?

Male supervisors and managers who want to increase their leadership effectiveness at work:

- Individuals who want to strengthen their leadership skills for effective communication and networking both inside and outside their organization
- Supervisors and leaders who want to influence the workplace culture in a positive way

Action Based Learning:

- Learn through conversation with other supervisors about real life examples, strategies and tactics
- Work with your own understanding and approach around gender, power and conflict
- Engage in action planning and make a commitment to bring this learning to life into the workplace

Be part of the change and part of the solution!

Contact us

The logo for NSCC (Nova Scotia Council for Change) features the lowercase letters 'nscC' in a bold, blue, sans-serif font. The 'n' and 's' are connected, and the 'c' is also connected to the 's'. The 'C' is larger and positioned to the right of the 'c'.

Tracy Boyer, Project Coordinator

t.boyer@ywcahalifax.com

Claire Seremba, Project Assistant

c.seremba@ywcahalifax.com

<https://ywcahalifax.com/advocacy/shift-change/>